tereo instance of Chainer say on tracks 31 and 32 (two eds card system) and then on page 1 of chainer open senderella aux 1 turning panpot all to the left and on page two senderella aux 2 turning panpot all to the right.

So now by just opening senderella 1 and 2 on any audio track (you should have both open to have stereo) you can by turning the volume on aux1 send to the left of your native aux effect and bu turning the aux2 (senderella channel 2) sending to the right of the native aux effect return.

This way you can send it anywhere on a stereo panorama !!

This does not sound peculiar strange or difficult , it is just as if you use two mono aux sends on any console although you make some extra moves here...

As you understand you don't need to buy anything to have your Paris DX auxes.
Senderella is free as Effectschainer is free too.
But if you want true stereo without risking any Paris bug thing I recommend the chainer (have I done this before ??)

I will try to find some other free way to have stereo aux using only free plugins.
One method coming to mind is by using two mono DX effects on stereo senderella return , for instance a DX reverb, opening the same reverb on track 31 and same on track 32.
Now by just panpot controlling the paris audio tracks (full left 31 and full right 32) you can have a quick stereo senderella aux system with free plugz

I will need your input here with you trying it too because I feel bored being alone on this ride !

 I have a very nice studio too...

Regarding senderella Tom,
 I don't know why your chainer does not save !!
 I have made many presets with chainer.
 It loads as vst from within Paris and saves as normal vst Paris driven plugin with save and then scroll down copy to library...
 This is extremely stable no Paris crshes and yes senderella is ONLY vst !
 No dx here only vst.
 I remember some old testings but now we have faderworks and more stable Paris with XP by disabling DX !
 I am sure DX is causing many problems to Paris.

I am making a project default with 64 chainer instances with 8 senderella auxes inside chainer and a faderworks instance with latency compensation for all 4 eds cards !

You know 14 samples from card1 to 2 and two samples thereafter, so when O load a new project all 4 eds cards are aligned , faderworks is there to delay compensate any further plugins and have 8 senderella auxes for DX auxing !

I can send the preset default (I don't know if it opens wit

That all sounds great Dimitrios. Specially the video!

Really, I think we can accomplish this using the newsgroup.
I'll be asking all kinds of questions when I get stumped.=20
Maybe a few pics from your beaches in Greece would be=20
a nice addition.

In price vacation will be included ! hehe...

I have a very good sounding and looking control room and a nice recording room , Paris , Focusrite isa 220 two channels, Avalon M5, Demeter stereo tube preamp, great microphones...

Ok I got carried away with this...

Regarding senderella I need your tests too because there are parts that I may not have thought and things can get better !

One nice thing with faderworks is that all my 64 Paris channels are now phase aligned !!

I like that !!

often my client comes to the studio but when they do, the first thing that happens is they see a 10 ft console and there's a gasp and then they all say the same thing as if they all belong to a club and were told at the last meeting to say "Man, look at all them buttons, what do you do with all that?"
half the stuff in the console I rarely use anymore, but who wants to have a big square hole in there console?

Dimitrios,
I have been following this closely. I still use Paris during mixing primarily as a mix only bus, but between FaderWorks and Senderella, I may have to reconsider Paris as a primary mix DAW.

I will be out of state for the next two weeks, but when I get back I will jump in and help with some tests.

GeneThanks and sorry about your MB!

Paul Barrere...!Anyone know what this is?
http://charleston.citysearch.com/profile/44977689/nashville_songwriters_series_billy_montana_and_a_smith.html

I guess for some people the title should be enough for not me.
Since it starts at 7:30 PM I can't imagine it lasting more than a couple hours too, not like an all day thing.

hmmThis is a multi-part message in MIME format.

one bent over. I would like to call them tomorrow and have them overnight a new board for tuesday and I will overnight this board back to them tomorrow so they will have it tuesday. I don't think they will do this. Their site says once they receive my board they will ship a new one in 2 to 3 days. That puts me down for a week instead of 1 day.

I also wanted to return this board for refund DOA and buy a new one overnighed but they won't do this either.

Do you know some other way to get me up on tuesday? ThanksI have a few DVD's of live performances, and I'd like to take a couple of clips and add them to my website or Youtube.

Anybody have any recommendations for software that will allow me to do this?

OK...anybody have any cheaper suggestions?

PC or mac are OK....As I have mentioned here a bit before, I've been in gear accumulation mode for the upcoming Mold Monkeys recordings. I now have a nice selection of reasonably priced but pretty nice microphones. Two channels of really superior preamps, six channels of pretty good preamps, and 16 channels of Mackie.
Of course most of this will be barely used save when tracking drums, where I think we'll be using twelve mics. 2x overheads, kick, top and bottoms snare, spot mics on three toms, hi hat, a knee high mic a few feet off the kit, and a stereo pair in the room. The problem now is that the studio has a Presonus Firebox and a MOTU 828. The studio computer is a Mac, and I've done some testing and using the two devices together

k at writing $2k checks.

So, to make a short story very long, are there other options for getting 16 really good line level converters into a computer for recording a full drum kit? And this has to be a no hassle, works all the time, we don't wind up pushing tracks around a couple of samples to compensate for different latency from different hardware.

And yes, one option would be another PARIS system for tracking, and then I would fly the tracks over to my SX rig via ADAT, which I've been thinking about doing, but I'm willing to hear suggestions from anyone.

Thanks,

TCBI've never done this exactly, but I bet if you call them and explain the situation they will overnight you a new board on Monday. Then might charge you for it and refund for the first board after they get the return (when is irritating, but not unreasonable). But the big thing is to call them and explain the situation, they really are about as good as it gets in the retail computer racket. You should try getting similar service from Tiger Direct or Fry's.

Ring then and explain the situation, and in my experience they'll make things happen.

Thanks

The stock 2408MKIII converters are similar in quality to the Multiface. I would give the Multiface a slight edge, but the modified 2408MKIII is a definite step up. Very open sounding. Not quite up to Prism, Mytek or Cranesong but better than RME.

2X MOTU 2408MKIII with Black Lion Mods.

Pick up 2408s on eBay.

This is expandable to 32 I/O analog and a total of 98 I/O.

The current drivers are stable on XP and OSX, MOTU supports 64 bit drivers.

The Black Lion Mods are excellent and get my 2408s very close to my Mytek.

looking forward to this one.

ps - I haven't heard anything back from Lisa - she may be on vacation.
I'll call her this afternoon and see if she's listened yet.

pabIn terms of sound-quality, you can't go wrong with the RME stuff.. at least from my experience with the Multiface.
IME, the biggest limitation with any convertor set is the maximum of 8 analog in's you're going to get per unit.

However, may I suggest the following solution to compliment your current gear array:

1 RME Multiface w/PCI card
1 Focusrite ISA 428 with the Digicard i/o option

This combination will get you 16 analog ins at up to 48k, 8 from the Multiface itself, 4 from the preamps in the 428, and 4 more from the extra line-in's on the 428, all of which will then be sent through the lightpipe outs of the 428 to the lightpipe in on the Multiface.

Bada-bing - done. In one fell swoop.

The other nice thing about the Multiface is that you can get a PCMCIA card for it & use it on a laptop - convenient since you guys play live (if you should ever want to record live gigs)

Sometimes you can find those ISA 428's used for in the $1600-ish range WITH the digital i/o option installed. Multifaces can be had used for in the $450 range, and I would recommend getting a new PCI card, because that way you know you're getting the newest version (there have been several versions)... they're about 200 bucks.
