I think what we have here is artists who see "ticket brokers" (isn't nice that we've come up with a sanitary, legitimate term for "scalpers"??) buying up all the tickets for their events and then raping the public for $200 and up a seat.

They probably sat down, said, "Well, if the public is stupid enough to pay that to a broker, then fuck 'em. Let's just charge that ourselves, and cut out the bastard who's stealing our money."

I hate scalpers. Hate 'em. Really. I know TicketBastard claims they don't cut any deals and everyone has the same chance - bullshit. Brokers always end up with 90% of the good seats. I'm sure a lot of it is pimping losers to stand in line and buy the max limit and then give them to the pimp. But I'm also sure that they have inside connections with TicketBastard.

I'm in a really foul mood tonight, for some effin' reason.

I laughed my ass off when I saw that. I wonder how many people got the "Big Bottom" joke....

Tap RAWKS. I have all their cd's, going way back to the early '60's.

Anyone see Nigel and David's appearance on the "Making of" video for the Hear'n'Aid project back in the '80's? Priceless.

David on Yngwie: "I like the way he puts 'Yngwie "J" Malmsteen so you can tell him apart from all the other Yngwie Malmsteen's in the business."

pabHi guys,

I'm wanting info on how to transfer large files from around L.A. back to Australia on a tight time schedule. I hear there are plenty of Internet cafe's and stuff (Starbucks / McDonalds?) which have local wireless access these days over there. Just looking for an idea of how inconvenient it would be to transfer large files over the internet from "on the street"?

We're hoping to be able to get the files within a fairly short time frame.

Any info on the availability of wireless internet over there would be appreciated, both in cafe's etc, and/or full mobile coverage deals. Is there anybody who offers a cheap deal for mobile internet from a laptop covering the city?

Cheers,

Kim. My son told me that when Jeff Berlin, Billy Sheehan and Steve Schram (I think that is his name) tour they do Big Bottom together at the end of the show.
