I had actually heard about that issue with some boards awhile back - I do have a PCI card with 2 Firewire & 3 USB ports on it laying around & was thinking about trying that, but then it occurred to me that if low-powered USB ports were the issue, then it's unlikely that my wireless network adaptor (for my DSL connection) would be working properly, since that's strictly USB-powered. I'm sure it takes more juice to run that than it does to run a USB key, and I'm getting a full-strength signal over DSL adaptor.

I think I'll live with it as it is unless it gets too inconsistent or annoying. Now if I were Deej...
