OK, I don't normally do this, but damn it, this song is driving me crazy and I need some opinions . . .

I'm linking a demo of a song from the new CD project. It's a weird little ditty and I just wanna know what people think and also if anyone can tell me what the hell kind of music this is. Or maybe that doesn't matter.
Who cares about categories anyway?

Remember, it's just a quick demo, so excuse the midi drums and the raspy scratch vocal. :)

:D ok, was just teasing there. Actually I think I'd describe it as eclectic-electric-folk. There was one part in there that had kind of Tori Amos vibe, but it's still more folk-oriented than that, I guess.

But it DOES have that sort of Acid-Era vibe to it... reminds me of something from that period - err... if i could... only... remember... what.

Melanie. Seriously - reminds me of her stuff!

Neil (who was, fortunately, still too young to be dropping tabs back then)Hi Mike,

I unzipped the new plugs into c:\windows\system32\ensoniq\plugins dir. However, I'm not seeing the new FX. What am I doing wrong?

I'm really at a loss, though. I haven't had that problem at all.

Let me know if it is just one plug or all of them.

Sarah,

Your voice reminds me so much of Grace Slick sometimes. I like the song and the mix/production.....it sounds somewhat "broadway musical'ish" to me.....perhaps it could be Rogers & Sarastein.

Put me on the list for a copy of the CD.

I'm getting pretty good at this stuff, I guess. About half an hour ago I was eating dinner and I heard what could only be described as a big explosion right outside our door. I grabbed a flashlight and ran outside and there was this drunk moron crawling out of his car. Miraculously, only a couple of scratches on him. My neighbor across the street saw him sideswipe two cars down the road about 100 yards and then start to accelerate away when the big black bear that has been hanging around here got scared by the noise and ran across the road. The guy swerved, overcompensated and rolled his car.

Luckily the bear is OK and this hole is on his way to jail.

I hope they improved the loading - I can't get it to preload anything - I have to run the keys for all sounds to get them to load and play - anyone have this problem with DFHS?

Hey Dj, you should have told him to forget the cops, he'd better get the hell out of there before the bear came back.

By the way, was his last name Kennedy?...Sorry , it's an Irish joke;)

At least you had some excitement for the night. Glad everybody is alright.Hey Dedric, I have DKFH-CV and did not respond well inside of Nuendo, but behaved very well in v-stack..

I also purchased the EZ drum kits and it to did not load well. I think they have addressed the load issues with this new interface and engine..

That being said, if you guys have no tried out XLN Addictive Drums. <http://www.xlnaudio.com/>
. They have raised the bar for all other virtual drum apps. These drums just plain work!! Period! They sound great, and very esy to edit.

On their site, they state that for $18K for the C24 and HD2Acel,96 io, some plugins..Not bad for a full blow Pro Tools rig.

Let's give Digi some credit for AT least trying to address the abandoned
"Mid Market" segment.

For those of you who not that familiar with PT HD. PT HD 2acel is a hell of a rig with alot of power. On a Nice MAC or PC (Multi-cores) you can run alot dsp and Rtas plugins along with 130 tracks.. Yes, I knwo we can do that with our Native apps, but, it's nto as smooth, flexible(routing) as this solution. Especialy with this controller-C24.

So, before you start the Digi bash, take real hard look at what's being offered.
My thoughts these days is that the DAW audio companies (Hardware & Software) want to nickel and dime you all the way to the top $20kPlus, 8 channels at a time.

As well as, Steingberg. They really need a unit like this for Cubase and Nuendo.

A similar controller for Nuendo costs over $20k.
<http://www.arbiter.co.uk/wkaudio/index.htm>

I think Digidesign has actually put together something that is pretty attractive here. I just wonder there the got'chas are. There are always got'cha's somewhere with Digidesign.....always.some critical functionality they leave out that costs big time if you need it.

Wasn't it WC sync with the 001/ 002 and 003???....I can't remember.Yep .The 003 WC.Finicky..
 But, HD..Smooth. I think Digi had to fight back with:

- 8 core16 core personal computers
- Apple's Logic Studio
- Steingberg Nuendo on 8 core 16 core personal computers.

I think they used their strenght with hardware to addred to Mid-Level pro market with a Product like HD2 Acel and a killer controller that has 16 mic pres and 8 x2 submixer, Talk back functions and full comaptibility with the Pro tools app. Nero zero latency...192 tracks @41/48k..96 tracks @96k..With full completemnt of plugins. This is not LE/M-powered..We're talking HD. Not that lame cripple ware. 18k from digi is looking really good.

heh

Sarah, I would call it electro-folk and it has Beatle-esque towards the end.
I would arrange it to support the vocal melody more strongly, but I like it.

Control 5's, and some big mains, but I can't recall the model number of those, and I really had trouble getting good mixes out of them, personally... resulted in a lot of ear fatigue. I've always heard that JBL's in general tend to have really tight cones, and when you hear something like a Fender Twin with JBL's, it kinda has the same strident sort of sound... very fatiguing to listen to - anyone else ever experience this?

Anyway, there was a freeware app that does the analysing part of this (but not the automatic tuning - which would be GREAT!); but at least it'll tell you where your modes & dips are - I can't recall the name of it, but I could try to find it if anyone's interested. You just need a good omni measurement mic & an uncolored, fast preamp to use it with.

Hey Tom,

Found the digikey site, but I'm unsure what part numbers to reference.

Could you post the part number of the replacement chip?

Thanks,

Aaron,

Digi-Key was the place to go.

The chip is no longer made by Fairchild

but they had a pin for pin replacement for .88/pc .

I got ten just in case all three of my Mecs need both replaced.

I hope this solves the whole problem.

Huge thanks to you my friend,

I'm not sure about the DM, but the 74LS series chip is pretty common TTL logic gate as I recall. Try getting specs at national semiconductor.

Have you looked at the usual suspects yet?

The results I've gotten so far aren't perfect matches.

I know it's unlikely but it's worth a try.

kind of music is it?" I say something like "quasi-psychedelic jazzy folk-rock show tunes."

As far as the "metrosexual" thing goes, I never bothered to ask anyone what that means. Being a nurse doesn't help except that I don't think metrosexuals are the ones showing up in the ER with strange objects lodged in their rectums. :)

Hi Erlio and Paul,

Give this ini file a try. I had some initial problems - I had been editing the ini files in notepad, and it seems to add some formatting that PARIS doesn't like. I opened the ini in visual studio and pasted into a new file. Hopefully, that will strip out any ugly formatting that is left. Worse comes to worse, I'll just type the whole thing again.

Let me know how it goes.

---=_linux47079c70--Hi Mike,

First off, thanks for doing all this work! Those of us who still use Paris every day salute you! Now, I'm a Mac guy. I downloaded the plugins from your website and they looked OK on my desktop. Are they PC only? I'm not seeing the Stereo Comp in my FX list. I have NoLimit w/ the meter.

Thanks again!

Ooops! I uploaded an ini file for a new version of the plug that I'm still testing!

Try this one, and let me know how it goes.

Sorry about the confusion, guys.

All the best,

Mike

They are PC only, at least for now. Are you running them on a PC and having the two latest ones not show up in PARIS?

I get up in the morning and design stuff, and he gets up and uses tools to extract objects in the ER...

But hey, that's why he gets the big bucks, right?

DCThis sounds really interesting. I'm gonna try K-14 metering. Apparently once you set it up you can just use your ears and forget the meters. I read all the threads and it makes total sense to me.

Hmmm.....wow!!...so that really is a "word". I thought you were making it up. I guess I'm totally out of touch with this stuff. I do sometimes exhibit a penchant for neatness but you'll not be finding any foreign objects in any of my offices.

;o)I'm in for $100, plus I'm in Toronto all the time and can get the cash to Mike ASAP.

Mike- let me know what I can do to help

That's not really part of the gig...

Carrying a man-bag around, having a 75.00 hair cut, being really neat and well-groomed, hang around with gay guys, dress to the nines, etc etc but sleeping with women only...

Metrosexual...

BTW, I fit about half of those!

shhh, don't tell my wife...

DCHi Ted,

We just need a copy of Visual Studio 4.2 cross platform for the Mac. At least,
I think we do. I'm taking an educated guess at that. If you can find one on ebay, we can give it a try. There was one there last week, but when I checked yesterday, I didn't see one.

This is very cool!

No. I'm Mac only. I've thought about switching to PC in hopes of squeezing another year or two out of Paris but the learning curve scares me! On the other hand, I'd be able to run the newer Waves and UAD-1 FX.

>I use it all the time - it's really designed to train your ears to hear max levels without over doing it, once you set your monitors to a reference level. Once you know what those reference levels are, you could setup your DAW's metering to correspond (at least you can in Nuendo simply by changing the green, yellow, red bands to correspond to whichever you are using for a project) - or you could just adjust your ears to hear -20, -14, or -12 as your "0" line (the idea behind the metering).

I use K-20 for film mixes, K-20/K-14 for DVD usually, with my monitors setup to adjust for 3 different SPL reference levels (85dBC for film). The key though is setting up your monitors to a reference level so loud does sound loud and you just don't want to go there as often as the current radio wars suggest. K metering gives you a visual reference to what is -12dBFS, -14dBFS, -20dbFS, etc as your SPL reference point.

RME's Digicheck has K metering and is extremely valuable. Inspector XL (Roger Nichols) also has K system.

Dedric

Hmmm..letsee.....no man bag, though my wife has encouraged this because when we go places I'm always needing her to put this or that into her purse because it's too cumbersome to put in my pocket. I mean, isn't this why men get married???, so they will have someone to carry their purse for them???...sheesh!!!!

$75.00 hair cut???.....I buzz myself with horse clippers about once a month (not kidding)

Neat and well groomed???.....humm, I'm usually toting around some horse manure and dog slobber somewhere on my person and I wear gimme caps incessantly because the solar radiation up here will fry the skin off a skinhead in 30 minutes. I'm constantly climbing over barbed wire fences so I buy my clothes at WalMart. I don't really like Walmart.....in fact I hate Walmart, but I need cheap, disposable clothes.

Sleeping with women.....well.....yeah, I do ascribe to this wholeheartedly but I woke up this morning sandwiched between two 160lb dogs who were using me for a heating pad. It's getting cold here at night these days.

;o)For you guys out there using BFD who absolutely hate the midi loop/audition interface (I'm one of those), there is a solution.

First go register at Toontrack, then DL the free EzPlayer.

Next, install the EzPlayer on your computer (it will only show up as a VSTi in a host sequencer)

Next, in your sequencer create a midi track.

Next instantiate EZPlayer as a VSTi and up at the top, go to the function where you navigate to your midi loops library and set directory path to your loops, wherever they may be.

Next instantiate BFD as a VSTi

In your midi track choose EzPlayer as the midi input and BFD as the midi output.

Now you can go to EzPlayer and click on the loop you want to audition, BFD will play it and then from EzPlayer you can drag and drop it into your sequencer midi track. It's incredibly quick and easy to use this way.

It looks like BFD2 is going to following a similar path as Toontracks EzDrummer from the looks of the interface. I can't wait. I didn't much like the samples in EzDrummer.too preprocessed for my tastes.

Anyway, for those who work with BFD and midi loops, this is definitely the ticket, IMO.

Digi-Key was the place to go.

The chip is no longer made by Fairchild

but they had a pin for pin replacement for .88/pc .

I just like to play with my toys. I did DL the Addictive Drums demo last night. 180MB.....for a demo???..anyway, I'm going to fire it up today and see what I think about it.

;o)Hi Mike,

I have now tested with both inifiles and it seems to be no luck for me at all to open the new ParisCompressor with any of these in WinXP. I see there are some bmp files inside the pluginmap that is needed to show up different EDS-plugins. Can it be a bmp-file that's missing?

guys and gals-

ok, it's that time of the month again. No, Not That Time! This time! Time to see Venus in the daytime Time!

Since our last session, Venus has crossed in front of the sun and is now leading it across the sky. Today, the moon is slowly closing in on Venus. I took this picture minutes ago with my ancient Sony camera. Over the next few hours, the moon will move closer towards the sun, passing Venus in about 11 hours (2001-10-07 5UT) after it sets later in the evening. But that's only here on the west coast of california. If you're in Asia, you may see the moon pass a couple of degrees north of Venus as it goes on it's merry way around the Earth. Tomorrow it will be between (and a bit north of) Venus and the sun.

steve the ever-helpful
